

Genesis

"An abstract based on images from Ashland's Blazer High School's original art designs. It represents a new beginning - or rebirth - in Ashland and the region with the five rods in the sculpture representing four elements of life: earth, air, water, fire, and God."

Vulcan

"The 'Vulcan of Ashland' is seen hammering the five elements on a forge which symbolizes the City and region's long history with metal and steel and the strength and the hard working people who live here."

Venus

"Venus in mythology was Vulcan's wife and the most beautiful woman in the world. 'Venus of Ashland' is offering an ash tree branch in the palm of her hand (tree of life). It represents the love for the wonderful people, culture, and natural beauty of the City of Ashland and the Commonwealth of Kentucky."
